

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Boards & Commissions

AN APPLICATION GUIDE

“Promoting Service, Responsibility and Integrity on boards and commissions.”

Vincent C. Gray
Mayor

A MESSAGE FROM THE MAYOR

If you're looking for a volunteer service opportunity, look no further than the District of Columbia's boards and commissions.

Boards and commissions cover a variety of topics and issues. Each, regardless of size, degree of sophistication or complexity of issues, is a key part of the District government. Each also requires service, responsibility and integrity.

There are advisory boards, policy-making boards, and licensing boards. Some appointments are appointed directly by the Mayor, and others require the Council of the District of Columbia's confirmation.

I want to ensure that our citizens are supported in each step of the appointment process. For most, that process is new and can be intimidating. This guide has been prepared to inform you about the opportunities for service and to explain the process.

I value the service and dedication that each individual provides through service on the boards and commissions of the District government. It is indeed government by the people in the most fundamental way.

We want to ensure that each participant's service is a positive, rewarding and beneficial experience. Citizen involvement contributes not only to the success of our government, but to our overall quality of life as well.

I thank you for taking the step in that process, and look forward to welcoming you to the team.

Sincerely,

Vincent C. Gray
Mayor

GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE APPOINTMENTS PROCESS

APPLICATION

Anyone interested in serving on a board or commission must complete an application Form (OBC Form 8) that is included at the end of this guide. You may also complete and submit a copy of the application form online. Each applicant's file, or request for appointment, is reviewed as boards and commissions are updated. When the application form is submitted, each applicant must also submit a copy of his or her most recent resume.

APPOINTMENTS WHICH DO NOT REQUIRE CONFIRMATION

The applicant is notified by phone at the time of the Mayor's appointment. Appointees may begin to serve on a board which does not require confirmation of the Mayor's appointment by the Council of the District of Columbia (Council) upon being sworn-in and the issuance of an official certificate of Mayoral appointment by the Mayor, or on his behalf, by an official in the Office of Boards and Commissions.

APPOINTMENTS WHICH REQUIRE COUNCIL CONFIRMATION

The Mayor will transmit the name, or names of individuals, to the Council in the form of a proposed resolution of confirmation. The proposed resolution is then forwarded to the committee of the Council having jurisdiction for that board or commission which may, or may not, decide to schedule and hold a confirmation hearing.

Confirmation hearing: If the Council committee schedules and holds a confirmation hearing, the applicant nominee must attend. Each nominee is expected to prepare a written statement of one to two pages highlighting his or her qualifications, experience and desire, and interest for serving. On average, the process normally lasts from 15 to 30 minutes. Once the appointment has been approved by the committee, the committee chairman reports the committee's action to the Council Committee of Whole to schedule approval by the full Council.

BACKGROUND CHECK:

While the background, education, and employment information provided by each applicant is checked and verified by the staff in the Office of Boards and Commissions, applicants for appointment to some boards and commissions, depending upon the degree of sophistication and complexity of issues that the board confronts, may undergo an extensive background investigation. The background check normally includes an examination of the income tax filing records, complete education background check, employment history check, criminal record check and driving record check, as well as some other aspects of an individual's background. The purpose is not to pry, but to ensure that an applicant's education, employment, and criminal backgrounds are fully verified. This measure prevents any undue embarrassment to the applicant over a fact that he or she may have forgotten, or unintentionally overlooked.

BOARDS AND COMMISSIONS STAFF

Boards and commissions members do not go it alone. Most boards have dedicated employees to perform daily administrative tasks. There are, however, a number of District boards that work within an agency or have access to advice from the agency. If a board works within an agency, certain central support services will usually be made available to the board or commission. The primary function of the agency staff assigned to the board or commission is to carry out the rules, policies, functions, and programs developed, or as directed, by the board or commission. In addition, the staff members notify board members of pertinent issues and legislative activity. They may also arrange meetings, prepare meeting materials, compile background information, and conduct research. The staff also serves as a liaison with other boards, government agencies, and the general public. The staff can be a valuable resource for boards and commissions, and a good staff member can enhance the productivity and effectiveness of a board or commission.

COMPENSATION

In general, the majority of appointees to boards and commissions do not receive compensation. Some appointees may be reimbursed, in accordance with District administrative policies and procedures, for travel and related expenses during the course of their duties. However, there are several boards and commissions where members are compensated for full-time or part-time service in accordance with their organic statute.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR BOARD SERVICE

Generally, each appointee to a board or commission in the District of Columbia (District) must be committed to providing public service, be a resident of the District, and be a U.S. citizen. There is no requirement that an applicant be a registered voter. Many boards and commissions may have additional requirements, depending upon the Mayor's Order or District statute establishing the board or commission. You may obtain a copy of the OBC Profiles Manual from the Office of Boards and Commissions to obtain specific requirements for a particular board or commission for more information.

INTERVIEWS

Candidates under consideration for appointment may be contacted by a staff member in the Office of Boards and Commissions, usually by phone, to discuss the candidate's interest in serving and to provide the candidate with more information about the board. The candidate would then be scheduled for an interview, or meeting, with Office of Boards and Commissions staff, which could include additional meetings with other District officials.

ROLES & DUTIES OF MEMBERS

PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITIES OF A BOARD OR COMMISSION MEMBER

District board members are in a critical position to shape and influence board decisions and actions. It is important that each member keeps himself or herself informed and up-to-date on issues, legislative activity, and statutes affecting their board or commission. In addition, it is important that each board or commission member always conduct themselves in a manner commensurate with the confidence placed in them by the Mayor through the mayoral appointment and the Council through its confirmation process. Each member shall also adhere faithfully during their tenure the three (3) guiding themes of board service. The guiding themes of board service include:

- SERVICE. A boards and commissions member desire to serve his or her fellow citizens is important and commendable. Members have an obligation to provide guidance and advocacy through their tenure of service, and to be fully prepared to discuss and consider issues before the board or commission.
- RESPONSIBILITY. A boards and commissions member has an obligation to fully carry out the requirements of his or her appointment through regular attendance at meetings. A member may forfeit his or her position on a board or commission as a result of poor attendance. Regular attendance is essential so that decisions may more truly represent the opinions of the board as a whole. In addition, regular attendance enables board members to keep abreast of board concerns and helps ensure that issues are examined from a variety of perspectives. If an organic statute does not address the matter, then the bylaws of your board or commission should define attendance requirements.
- INTEGRITY. A boards or commissions appointee holds the public's trust, and as such must recognize that the public interest is the top priority. Personal, professional, business, family, or monetary consideration should never interfere with a boards and commissions member's judgment on issues and cases. Each member should approach the work of his or her committee in a fair, open and impartial manner without regard to outside influence or prejudice. Remember, your fellow citizens are depending on you.

TYPES OF BOARDS AND COMMISSIONS

A board or commission may be established by Mayor's Order, by District statute and rule, or by federal law and regulation. There are three (3) main types of boards:

Advisory Boards. These may be created by the Mayor, the Council, the Courts, or the federal government. The members serve as advisors on policy matters to the appointing authority responsible for administering policy. Advisory boards may study existing policy and make recommendations for changes or implementation. Advisory boards do not have authority to enforce policy or create rules, but their analysis and recommendations can play an important role in furthering the effective operation of the District government. (Example: Health Services Reform Commission)

Policy-Making Boards. These boards generally receive their authority by statute. Policies are created through careful analysis and interpretation of legislative intent, as set forth in the statute. Policy-making boards often may serve as governing boards within an agency. The boards may be responsible for directing the agency, approving budgets, creating and implementing agency policy, or appointing the agency director. Members of these boards have final decision-making authority. (Examples: Public Housing Authority Board of Commissioners, Convention Center and Sports Authority Board of Directors)

Regulatory Boards. These boards or commissions may have some of the responsibilities of the advisory and policy boards, depending on the statute or Mayor's Order establishing them. Usually, these boards are created by statute, and perform rule-making or quasi-judicial functions. In fulfilling these functions, the board or commission may operate as a quasi-legislative body, or as a review and appeals body. As an appeals body, regulatory boards hear individual cases and rule on them; board decisions, however, are subject to judicial appeal in either the D. C. Columbia Superior Court or the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. (Example: Board of Zoning Adjustment, Alcohol Beverage Control Board.)

Regulatory Boards also have the responsibility to determine the competence of members of a professional or occupational group. The board may examine and license members of occupations to practice in the District, or take disciplinary or corrective actions, such as revoking or suspending licenses, in accordance with District law. (Examples: Board of Medicine, Board of Nursing, Board of Accountancy, Board of Architects and Interior Designers.)
